

ABSTRACT

To reduce the torque ripple of permanent-magnet excited synchronous motors (1) having tooth coils (6), constructive means are proposed for damping or eliminating the fifth and/or seventh harmonic wave of the rotor field which mainly cause torque ripple.